The telegraph mentioned a few days ago that a Mrs. Brown had been killed by her paramour in New York. The following from the Tribune give Accidentally Shot .- About 10 o'clock on Thur red in, or rather was, on new-year's day, in all night the residents of Nucetaenth street, between principal cities. The "right of search" into the Breadway and the Fifth Atenne, were roused from their naud quietness by lond acreams of "Murder!" "Indice!" "Police!" emanating from the premises No. 11, inhabited by a Rh. Brown.

"Murder!" 'Police!" 'Police!" emanating from the premises No. 11, inhabited by a Mrs. Brown. A sign on Its out-file indicated that the house was occupied as a millinery and dress making establishment. Segreant Hervort and officer Masterson, of the General Superintendent's officer Masterson, of the General Superintendent in the police, and, hastening into the house, found Mrs. Bins in high upon the floor, apparently in a dying condition, she having been shot in the addomen. The aufortunate woman was horne to her bed, and surgical ald was summoned.

The facts in regard to the triggical occurrence are as follows, as mear as our reporter could ascertain. Mrs. Brown, as mer as our reporter could ascertain. Mrs. Brown, it appears, was making preparations to accompany one of her friends to the Annual Ball of No. 8 Engine Company, to be held at Nitolo's, when Mr. Brown, her reputed husband, came in Learning from her the situation of affairs, Brown became terribly enraged, and put a vein upon her movements. Mrs. Brown persisted in going and completing her toiletle, and descended to the parlor to meet ther friend. Hrown had wrought himself into a lowering passion. He ordered the man to leave the hoase; but he not feeling Inclined to obey, Brown attemoted to eject him. Considerable of a scuttle cassed, when the man, retreating vulnatarity, pulled a revolver from his pocket, and almed it at Brown. As his flager pressed the trigger, Brown drupped, and thus escaped. Mrs. Brown was disceily behind him, and the shot took effect in her addinger. The bullet struck the nusceles, and, glaccing off, took a circuitans route around the body, and lotged in or near the spine. The wound
